ABOUT DUTCHAVELLI

Make no mistake – Dutchavelli is doing it for greatness. The East London rapper set a goal four years ago – to be the best. A rapper’s rapper with true global appeal, a handsome side road hustler gone national, a man with a firm presence and a clear vision – Dutch has it all. And – in “Only If You Knew” and “Surely” – he already has two of the year’s biggest singles under his belt. Born in Birmingham, but raised in Rotterdam, Dutch spent his childhood between the Netherlands and the U.K. When he moved to East London at age 12, he had a generation’s worth of music to catch up on. Dutch released his debut video, “New Jack City,” in 2017 then served time for a March 2018 robbery and firearm charge. His first track since his release, “Only If You Knew,” charts the story of the past few years. The next track “Surely” doubled down on the bars. Both tracks racked up millions of plays in a matter of weeks. With the U.K. hanging on for his next release, Dutch’s ambitions now reach far and wide. He’s a true business mogul too as he wants his label, 2Up2Down, to become a hot spot for young acts. Dutch is perhaps the most versatile, multi-faceted rap act to come from the U.K. in years. There’s been no slip-up, no selling out and no watering down of his experience for commercial woo-ing either.
