October 28, 2022 (Los Angeles, CA)– Today, singer, songwriter, and producer Gus Dapperton rolls out his seductive new single, “Wet Cement.” Listen HERE via Warner Records. The melodic track slowly builds, highlighting the 25-year-old’s impressive vocal abilities, before ending with a rapturous guitar solo. It’s his first original release since he announced his signing with Warner Records.

Beginning with gentle guitar plucking and Dapperton’s filtered voice, “Wet Cement” finds the artist serenading life’s impermanence. “Sunrise, tearing down the old,” he croons. “The light moves fast, I still race it home.” Soon, other elements, such as piano, drums and layered vocals enter the mix, taking the stripped-back lament to soaring unexpectedly euphoric heights. While the journey is fleeting, he finds the beauty in the moment.

“It had been about a year and a half since the release of my last record, Orca,” Dapperton says of “Wet Cement.” That was a long time for me to discover new inspiration.” However, he knew couldn’t force it. ““Wet Cement’ talks about the push and pull, back and forth, and uncertainty of life,” the artist continues. “Something I constantly battle is seeking the chaos and excitement of change while knowing that routine and monotony may be what is best for me.”

Throughout his career, the New York native has been careful to sidestep definition, crafting music that defies genre and summation. It’s an experimental spirit that adds vibrant layers to “Wet Cement.” Now, with the powerful new track he is poised to become an era-defining artist.
