Happy Friday! The music world did not disappoint on the last Friday of August, with an influx of catchy, hit-worthy new songs. Of course, the big story of the week is Britney's return to music, via a duet with Sir Elton John himself. But beyond Britney, this week also brought about plenty of indie-pop songs and dance songs, from new Julia Wolf to new David Guetta and Bebe Rexha.

Lets get into this week's picks, and soak up the final days of summer:

Joji announced his newest album, SMITHEREENS, by dropping a new single, “YUKON (INTERLUDE).” “YUKON (INTERLUDE)” finds Joji embracing uncertainty, in a trippy, psychedelic reality. The fast-paced track has some of the same piano elements from his viral hit “Glimpse of Us,” but the similarities end there. “And my eyes get low in that all-white truck, I can barely see shit / Hit the gas like you wouldn’t believe it / Thank God I was always healing,” he sings on the R&B infused track.
